

Pertinent Paragraphs

The American Humane Education society has issued a pamphlet headed thus: "Disarm the Children." The society maintains that popguns, toy swords, etc., have a tendency to create in the child a desire for the possession and use of genuine lethal weapons. Personally we are inclined to disagree with the learned society—on the strength of our own experience—which was that several years intervened between the popgun stage and the time we began to think of shooting as something well worth looking into. They also maintain that a boy should not be allowed to own or use a real gun until he is 20 or more years of age. In this we concur—in fact, we will go even further and say that regardless of age no boy should be permitted to own a gun—unless he has had expert instruction in the use of firearms, and has a bit of common sense. Then let him have a gun—if he likes them—and appears to have the makings of a sportsman in him. Then he need not be 20 years old—15 years is long enough to deprive a boy of the pleasure of shooting.

We have been hearing on all sides much discussion for and against an airport for San Jose and the surrounding territory. A good location is now being considered, but occupants of adjacent property are putting up a large, healthy howl against the proposition, because, they say, the noise of the planes will interrupt their sleep. Too bad. As we view the matter, people who have so much money they can find time to sleep when the planes are most active don't deserve much consideration. If they have the means, why not move even farther into the country? Not so hot as a genuine solution, eh? We admit it. Let us offer, then, something better. Why not locate the much mooted flying field on Winchester road, directly across from the old Winchester house? Of course, there is a young orchard where a few years ago nothing but tomatoes were grown, but according to information we have picked up here and there the revenue from a first class flying field would be greater than that coming from a prune orchard. The location is, in our opinion, ideal. A few minutes by car from San Jose or Campbell, reasonably close to Saratoga, Santa Clara and Los Gatos, the field would be accessible by electric cars, being directly on the Palo Alto interurban line. We don't know much about such things—but tell us, what do you think of the idea?

An editorial in Judge points to the "lame ducks" of the house and senate as something to be done away with. Lame ducks, according to the editorial, are lawmakers who were defeated in the November election, limping back to their posts Dec. 4 to impede the progress of legislation. Responsible to no one, the hopes of these men lie with their party leaders—and in a juicy appointment—which may be gained by supporting party measures. "You vote for my bill and I'll vote for your bill" stuff. "This is why," says

Examinations For Annapolis, West Point In Order

January 12, 1929, at 9 o'clock a. m. at postoffices in San Jose and Santa Barbara, Calif., the civil service commission will conduct examinations of applicants for admission to the military academy at West Point and the naval academy at Annapolis.

Applicants for the naval academy must be not less than 16, nor more than 20 years of age on the first of April of the year of entry in the academy; applicants for the military academy must be between the ages of 17 and 22 years.

Any young man desiring to take this examination should communicate immediately with Congressman A. M. Free, Room 329, House Office Bldg., Washington, D. C., who will forward an authorization for the taking of this examination.

Appointments to these academies will be made only from the list of those certified after examination.

No Quorum, C. Of C. Election Postponed, Special Meeting

Inclement weather, other meetings, and illness of several regular members combined to prevent the presence of a quorum Monday evening at the Chamber of Commerce so the meeting was adjourned at the call of the president. Notice of that meeting appears in this issue of The Press.

Judge, "the short session is invariably rife with halfbaked legislation, extravagant appropriations and other antics of the political animal at his worst." And Judge seems to have the correct slant on the subject.

That's all.

Haliwell & Jones Have New Machines

Haliwell & Jones, operators of a service station at the corner of Campbell avenue and Winchester road report business is so good they were recently forced to replace some of their equipment with other having a greater range and capacity.

Among other things they have installed a new battery charging apparatus which is capable of charging at one time twice the number of batteries as the machine formerly in use.

Due to the fact that pneumatic tires have almost altogether replaced solid tires on trucks, which means a greater demand for "free air," these progressive men have just finished hooking up a new air compressor which will, according to Mr. Haliwell, take care of the increased demand for air.

The plant is now equipped to handle all phases of automobile servicing with speed and accuracy.

Masonic Election Puts Three Young Men In Office

Last week Charity lodge No. 362 F. & A. M. of Campbell held its annual election of officers at an enjoyable meeting which included an excellent "feed" served by Harry White of the Busy Bee Restaurant.

The result of the election is as follows: Worshipful master, Robert Schultz; senior warden, A. C. Anderson, and junior warden, P. H. Dunlap. R. G. Archibald and T. A. Robinson were re-elected treasurer and secretary respectively. The appointive offices of senior and junior deacons have not yet been filled.

Installation of officers is expected to take place in the lodge rooms at IOOF hall in Campbell Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

T. A. Cutting, Miss Katherine Wood Directed Success

"One of the prettiest and most entertaining performances ever staged in Campbell" is the general verdict of all who saw the operetta, "Jan of Windmill Land" which was put on last week by the young people of the Congregational church and others.

The Dutch scenic effects were painted by F. H. Cutting, assisted by Miss Kittie Johnson. Tulip footlight decorations added to the color of the performance.

A story of St. Nicholas season with good and bad fairies working spells on the boys gave a very good picture of the beliefs and customs of the sturdy Dutch people.

All parts were well played, the entire cast deserving much credit for the splendid performance.

Two prominent parts learned by Helen Stray and Helen Robinson were given to Helen Buck and Eileen Fulton at the eleventh hour, due to the illness of the former two young ladies. These girls deserve special commendation.

The "Gollywogs," flower fairies and baby bulbs were features by the younger folks and were treats of much merit and merriment. At several points in the entertainment the youngsters completely stole the show.

Following is a list of the names of the kiddies who represented the various things in the play:

A delightful dinner such as only good cooks can prepare was enjoyed by Kiwanians and their wives Tuesday evening. Immediately following the dinner the party adjourned to the IOOF hall where Mr. Tupper, the club's speaker for the evening, gave an interesting illustrated lecture tour to the Central American states, Cuba and return through the southern states. His talk was given at this hall in order that the members of the Grange might share in the entertainment.

Mr. Tupper represents the Panama Mail Steamship company which starts a tour of this route Jan. 3. He stated that all the varied sights and beauties of Spain and the interesting customs of these famous people are still to be seen in the "unspoiled, unexploited Central American countries." As these are our nearest foreign neighbors it behooves us to know them better and cultivate a real interest in them and their development.

Roy Archibald is slated for chairman next week with a suggestion that he may secure some "trusts" to give us real tips on cheap money and how to get it.

Crane Company's Traveling Exhibit Here Monday A. M.

Home owners and prospective builders in Campbell will have an opportunity of seeing the remarkable traveling exhibit of plumbing materials which will visit here Monday morning, Dec. 17, from 9 a. m. until noon, according to C. H. Whitman. In a big special body built on a motor truck of 223-inch wheelbase will be shown a varied and interesting display of the most modern ideas in bathroom, kitchen and laundry equipment.

Many thousands of people have examined this free exhibit along its route from coast to coast, and have carried away many practical ideas and suggestions for the improvement of their homes, said Mr. Whitman.

Within the car is installed a modern built-in bath tub complete with overhead shower and aqua silk curtain. An attractive combination kitchen sink and laundry tray, a popular fixture which saves space, time and steps is also displayed. Lavatories, closets and other bathroom fixtures and accessories help make this exhibit complete, in addition to the Premier automatic storage gas water heater, Crane automatic water softener, and for rural sections and suburban towns beyond the reach of city water mains, the Crane automatic water system.

Additional interest is given this exhibit from the fact that the supply fixtures of the lavatories and the sink are actually connected to running water. The water is supplied by the Crane automatic water system.

There is no admission charge. None of the fixtures displayed are for sale, although any or all of them may be obtained and in-

by Brydon, Billy Barron, Dennis Bennett, Teddy Cutting, Philip Robson, Alfred Kersgand, Horace Person, Richard Morton, Theodore Knopf, "Gollywogs"—Philip Covey, Frank Covey, Dennis Bennett, Philip Robson, Edwin Kergard, Melvin Genasci, Eldred Coupland, Teddy Cutting, Winfield Archibald, Wilbur Morton, Milton Bachman.

Directors of the operetta were T. A. Cutting and Miss Katherine Wood. Miss Elsie Merrill presided at the piano during the entire play.

F. E. Duncan Pioneer, At Rest

Funeral services for F. E. Duncan were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Congregational church in Campbell, the Rev. J. H. Bennett conducting the service. Interment was made at Los Gatos cemetery. Mr. Duncan passed away suddenly Tuesday evening at his home on Johnson avenue. He had not been in good health for the past two years.

A native of Michigan, Mr. Duncan came to this state 51 years ago, being five years old at the time. For the past 45 years he had lived on his ranch on Johnson avenue. In 1893 he was united in marriage to Miss Emily Fairfield, a neighbor who had until three years prior to her marriage resided in San Francisco. To the union were born seven children, Freeman D. of San Leandro, Mrs. Marjorie Donahue of Tuolumne county, Gilmore A. of Stanford university, Mrs. Emily McConnell of Campbell, Mrs. Frances Muir of San Francisco, and Richard of Campbell. Others surviving are Mrs. Emily F. Duncan, wife of the deceased, two brothers, William F. of Imperial and Gilmore of Hollister, and a sister, Mrs. Edith Willett of Ceres, and ten grandchildren.

Before his illness Mr. Duncan was active in community and lodge affairs, having been at one time a member of the Grange, a charter member of the Kiwanis club, and a charter member of the Campbell chapter of Odd Fellows, in which organization he was particularly interested. Local Odd Fellows attended the funeral as a unit.

A large circle of friends extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

Campbell Grange Fair And Dance Well Attended

Saturday was a busy day for Orchard City Grange members who assisted with the all day fair held in the IOOF hall.

Booths were filled with products of the culinary and needlework skill of the ladies; at others baskets, plants and shrubs were on sale, and several more provided various forms of amusement.

The restaurant did a rushing mid day business that promised to clean the boards.

In the evening part of the scene of action shifted to the community hall in the library where those who wished to dance found opportunity to enjoy themselves.

The various committees certainly deserve the plaudits of their order for the success of the undertaking.

Alumni Cagers Trim Mountain View Teams

The two basketball teams of the Campbell high school alumni trimmed Mountain View alumni cagers in that city Saturday night. The first game resulted in a score of 32 to 12 and the second wound up 38 to 13.

NOTICE!

Special called adjourned meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Monday evening, Dec. 17, at 7:30 in the community hall, for the election of officers. Members are urged to make a special effort to be present.

stalled by your regular plumbing contractor with little or no delay. Visitors to the exhibit will be presented with a booklet, "Planning the Small Bathroom," which contains many practical suggestions on the subject of bathrooms—layout, design, floor plan, etc.

Girl Who Came Back

WNU SERVICE

"There you go, worrying again. Holy smokes, what's the matter with you? I tell you, you positively don't drink enough, and that's all there is to it." He called over the waiter to remedy this defect in her character. At the same time he tugged at the waiter's coat and pulled him over to whisper into his ear. The waiter nodded. Lawrence rose.

"Come on," he said crisply, "I guess we better get out of all this noise; maybe that's what upsets you. He's going to get us a quiet table upstairs." With misgivings that she swept aside with the thought that nothing mattered anyway, Lolita followed him upstairs. The waiter led the way out upon what appeared at first glance to be a large second-story porch, but Lolita saw at once that it was partitioned off into little sections which opened out into large trees that grew all about the house, but was shut off from the rest of the house by a door which the waiter closed after he had brought two more little opaque glasses of liquid fire and withdrawn. Lolita walked to the window and stood looking out into the calm trees with the moon above them. She thought of her father, of Mr. Warrill, of the girl friends she had had down in Elgin. Suddenly she felt tears starting. She wanted so much some one who would care for her, man or woman; some one to whom she mattered in some way, shape, manner or form, and there was no one! Suddenly, however, she found herself held tightly in Lawrence's arms. For a moment she lay against his shoulder, grateful for even this species of solicitude; and then he made a daring move which sent anger into her veins like molten fire. She struck out at him with all her might, but he was surprisingly strong. Completely sobered by the knowledge of his intentions, so pointedly demonstrated, she fought like a young tigress, every atom of her being instinctively loathing and fearing the youth now. It seemed too late for the realization to do any good, but she did very definitely have the consciousness that however much she might believe that she did not care what happened to her, and how far she went along the wrong path, she did, as a matter of fact, care a whole lot. She would have given anything in the world to be back safely in her room alone. She could feel her strength failing and knew that in a moment the battle would be over, and that she would have lost. Lawrence, feeling her weaken, clasped both arms about her, outside of her own arms, holding her completely helpless, and pressing his lips down upon her own in a wet kiss that sent a perfect nausea of revulsion through her. She struggled again to free herself, but he picked her up bodily and was carrying her across the room when out

"Me," she began, imitating his diction, "my name's Margaret Farrar; I'm a writer; I live all by my lonesome. I was out for a walk when I heard your extremely nervy hail and came along with you, and in a little sorry I did already, because if you drink very much more of the gin you'll probably overturn the car in a ditch going home."

"Thank's for the buggy ride," commented the youth, tossing off another glass of gin, and nodding for her to finish hers, which she promptly did. "There's only one thing that I like better than gin, and if you don't want to get dumped into a ditch on the way home, you better lure me away from the gin with a little loving."

"Loving?" laughed Lolita, "don't be silly; why, I don't know you at all." However, she was not particularly offended at what he had said. What difference did it make, after all? And, besides, the gin was beginning to make her feel peculiarly happy and carefree. She rose at his nod to dance; and it seemed to her that in all of her life she had never enjoyed a dance so much before. He held her so tightly that the breath was almost squeezed out of her, but she rather liked it; that is, until suddenly she saw a familiar figure emerge from a door on the other side of the room, look about carelessly, and then suddenly spot her. As the calm gray eyes of the man who had been mysteriously caring for her met hers she felt suddenly sobered. There was something positively frightening in them.

He swung about on his heel, made one or two swift motions with his hands and turned back through the door out of which he had emerged a moment before. Almost immediately three or four rough-looking characters followed him through the door.

Lolita decided to say nothing about the incident to Lawrence. He led her back to their table.

"You're a dancing fool," he told her with evident intent to flatter; "tell me, can you love like you can dance; or would you rather take a turn at the roulette wheels downstairs first?"

"I think that what we had better do is leave at once," she told him anxiously.

of the dark a gruff voice sounded: "Put her down," was all that the voice said, but its timbre was such that even the half-intoxicated youth obeyed instantly.

Again, almost immediately, Lolita heard that horrible sound, so like an apple being thrown up against a brick wall, which had presaged Harvey's death. She slumped to the floor and would have fainted if a strong arm had not suddenly grasped her. She saw now, by the dim light of the moon, that there were three or four men in the porch alcove. They stood stolidly purposeful, like black wraiths.

"Don't kill him; oh, please don't kill him!" Lolita begged, mindful of what had followed a former occurrence of this kind.

"He's just out," said a gruff voice in a kindly manner that heartened her. "Come around in a minute or two."

"Can you walk now?" asked the man who was holding her.

Lolita stood up and took a step forward. Almost immediately the door opened and the light from the hall shone out. For just a fleeting moment she caught a glimpse of the familiar form of the man with the gray eyes in the hall and then he vanished down a stairway. Without a word she walked along between two of the men, each of whom held one of her arms, while another walked before them and another behind. Down through the house and out a back door they took her, finally leading her to a large, black touring car and assisting her into it. Without a word two of the men climbed into the front seat, and two more into the back seat, one on each side of her. The car started with a jerk and soon was flying back toward town at a frightening rate of speed. Not a word was spoken by any of the men, all of whom wore caps pulled down low over their eyes. At last she turned to the one upon her right:

"Are you sure that you didn't kill that young man?"

Both of the men laughed throatily.

"Kill him! H—! Takes more than a poke in the jaw to kill a guy. He's probably behind us in the road by this time."

"Who is that gray-eyed man who sent you to take me home?"

There was no reply to this.

"Please," she insisted, turning to the man on her left "I want very much to know."

Still no reply.

For several minutes she plied them with questions bearing upon this subject, but not a word would either one of the men say; they sat like Indians, staring out at the side of the road as though they were totally unaware that she was in the car.

Presently the sound of racing engines behind them attracted the men's attention. The man at her right called out an order to the driver and the car slowed down from its terrific pace of sixty miles an hour or more. Almost immediately two motor cycles, each with a uniformed policeman upon it, came up on both sides of the car. The car stopped and one of the officers approached it, while the other remained behind with, as Lolita could see when she looked through the rear glass, a drawn revolver in his hand. She was frightened to death; but no sooner had the officer who had dismounted walked over to the driver than he turned, called out to the officer behind the car, "They're Charlie's men," and promptly drove off.

The car started again, gradually working up a speed even more breathtaking than before. In an incredibly short space of time, Lolita found the car stopping before the building in which she roomed. Without saying a word to her, one of the men took her arm, led her to the door, waited while she opened it with her key, tipped his hat and was gone. From the one glance she got at his face with the light from the hall upon it she knew that he was the kind of man whom she would instinctively have walked around several blocks to avoid. His face was the sort which can only be properly described by the adjective hard and his eyes were almost murderously cold and unsympathetic and yet such men had rescued her. The wonder of it so occupied her mind as she walked up the stairs to the second floor that she almost stumbled over Warrill's feet, where he was sitting asleep in a hall chair.

Warrill rose unsteadily to his feet. Probably Lolita had never presented such a perfect picture of youth and beauty in her life. She had taken off her hat and was carrying it in her hand. Her bobbed hair caught the light burnished gold recesses. Her cheeks were flushed from the effects of the gin and the evening's excitement. She looked a little frightened, softly feminine and tremendously appealing, but Warrill frowned at her.

"I'm sorry, Miss Farrar, if I'm intruding, but I'm worried about your sister. A quite terrible thing happened in class today and I'm afraid she's done something desperate. I decided to stay here until she came back, or until you came back; I guess the lady of the house thought that I had gone out. There doesn't seem to be anybody around. I sat down here to wait and went to sleep." He spoke in a very low tone. Thoughtfully Lolita motioned for him to follow her. Entering her room she was careful to turn on nothing but a little reading lamp that just barely lighted the room. Closing the door softly she turned to him:

"My name," she said steadily, watching him and wondering what had become of the glow of admiration for her beauty that she had seen in his eyes earlier in the evening, "is not Farrar; it is Forbes. My sister's name is Lolita Forbes."

"So I was told this afternoon. She had been attending a class of mine, but that doesn't make any difference, one way or another. The important thing is: What has become of her? Where can she be at this hour of the night?" Mischievously Lolita carried on her deception.

There is no telling where Lolita Forbes may be at this hour of the night.

Campbell, Union Stage Health Poster Contest

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the schools of our high school district were invited to compete in a health poster contest under the auspices of the Santa Clara County Tuberculosis association. Union and Campbell grammar schools took part. The prize winners were, in order: Grand prize, tie between Jennier Calli, 8, Union, and Richard Morton, 7a, Campbell; 2, Ethel Kirk, 8A; 3, Kermit Van Every, 8B; 4, Yoshiko Iwori, 7A; 5, Anne McMarrus, 8B; 6, Helen Robinson, 6A; 7, Paul Goddard, 6B; 8, Ruriko Nishahara, 5A; 10, Bert Johnston, special grade; 11, Katherine Barbano, special grade.

The prize winning posters may be seen at Shadle's drug store.

Posters winning honorable mention may be seen in the Campbell Meat Market. Winners of mention were Sallie Davidson, Emma Geiser, Francis Pryor, Janette Wellington, Madeline Messina, Lorena Wingard, Maxine Bouchard, Anthony Mariani, Dennis Bennett, George Barbano, Willard Wagner, Everett Strong, Marion Peake, Richard Salico, Frank Bonocorso, Theodore Knopp, Sam Feresi, Vivian Johnson, Norma Vannucci, Jacob Boyto, Basilio Moranti, Anne Gluhacie, Guy Jacks, John Marlais, Janice Soutar, Mona Keesling, Eleanor Knopp, Betty Best, Annie Boyto, Susan May Benton, Dolores Souza, Emily Messina, Louise Barbano, William Barron, and Peter Yerkovich.

The judges were staff members of the county tuberculosis association and the Health Center.

The idea of the contest was to get the child to express in poster form what the Christmas seal means to him. The contest created a keen interest on the part of all the children and brought out many original and interesting impressions and gave considerable impetus to the interest in health. The returns from the Christmas seals are used for establishing and maintaining preventoria and for putting on high school health clinics such as we had in our high school last year. Every penny invested in Christmas seals is an investment in health for the children of the community.

Will not be open Christmas day—the only day in the year that the entire force observes as a holiday.

We want to take this opportunity to wish our friends and patrons a merry Christmas—and a happy New Year—and everything.

And speaking of Christmas—every kid in town 12 years old or under is invited to visit Santa Claus at 2 o'clock p. m., Dec. 24—at the Christmas tree in front of the Busy Bee. There's a gift for every youngster who shows up from 2 o'clock on until we close up shop.

Again, greetings!

Mr. and Mrs. Harry White—and "The Kid."

How They Vary

FROM the tiny stringless beans which are canned whole and used in salads and for garnishes, to the larger beans which are canned either whole or cut, the green bean is known to the housewife as an ever present help in time of trouble. A can of the small beans will form the basis of a salad when company drops in unexpectedly, and the larger beans can always be cooked with pork to make a substantial meal. Green beans can be used to make a soup, too, that is fancy enough for any meal.

They're Mighty Good

Here are some recipes which taste like more:

Financier's Luncheon Salad: Cut cold, rare roast beef in thin, small shavings. Drain a can of small, stringless beans and slice a cucumber very thin. Marinate the meat, beans, cucumber and cooked artichoke hearts separately in French dressing for a long time before serving. Chill. Then pile beef in a lettuce leaf in the center of the plate and surround this with three small lettuce leaves holding a spoonful of beans, cucumber and artichoke heart, respectively.

Green Bean Soup, Julienne: Melt four tablespoons butter, add four tablespoons flour, and smooth; add three cups milk and one cup juice from a can of stringless beans and stir until thick and bubbling. Season with two teaspoons salt, pepper, celery salt and onion juice to taste. Cut one-half cup of stringless beans (one-half of a number 2 can) in fine, lengthwise shreds, mince two tablespoons parsley, and add. Heat and serve.

Here's Our TRADE-IN Proposition Are You On?

How'd you like to be ridin' pretty on new Goodyear tires—full of the most traction, safety, good looks and long, low cost tire mileage built into any tires in the world?

Easy!

We'll just trade you all the mileage value still left in your old tires for full credit on our low price for GOODYEARS.

We make only a limited number of trades in a season, so you'd do well to take up this proposition now.

Miss Irene Preston Married To Lewis H. Field At Yuma

Friends in Campbell were surprised to learn of the marriage of Miss Irene Belle Preston and Lewis H. Field, Dec. 1 at Yuma, Ariz., to which city the young people journeyed to avoid the three day law of California.

Mrs. Field has been teaching in the schools at Vista and will continue with her work. The groom, who is county horticulturist of San Diego county is also located at Vista.

The bride is a Campbell girl, having spent most of her life here, graduating from the local schools and the state teachers' college. She is a charming young woman, popular with her group of school friends and others who wish her much happiness.

Mrs. Catherine Fore Honor Guest At Birthday Party

Mrs. Catherine Fore was the guest of honor at a celebration at her home on Coe avenue, San Jose, Sunday, in honor of her eighty-third birthday. Mrs. Fore was one of the early residents of Campbell and has many friends here who extend their felicitations.

Christmas Party Monday Afternoon

Attention of members of the Country Woman's club is called to the Christmas party Monday, Dec. 17. Members are asked to invite guests. Each person is requested to bring a toy to be sent to the Indian children—also serviceable clothing for Indian girls going to the cities to work. Come and have, as well as help make, a pleasant afternoon.

Methodist Church W. C. Robins, Pastor

Sunday Dec. 16, morning worship at 11. The Rev. C. W. Gawthrop, superintendent of Northern California Anti-Saloon league will speak.

Evening services at 7.30, led by the pastor.

Sunday school at 9:45. A large attendance is urged.

Annual "stocking filling" with impromptu program Monday evening at 7. This is for church and Sunday school—old and young. Bring candy, nuts, dried fruits and a lot of good cheer.

Sunday school Christmas tree program will be held Saturday night, Dec. 22. Committees are at work and a good time is being planned. Bring the youngsters.

High PTA

The regular meeting of the High school P. T. A. will be held in the assembly room of the high school next Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 18 at 2:45 o'clock.

The girls of Mrs. Howe's glee club will entertain with music, and Miss Innes of the state teacher's college will give a talk on "Personal Tests."

The seniors and juniors have been invited to attend in a body. It is hoped that all parents will attend, as the talk to be given by Miss Innes is of vital importance to both parents and students.

night. She is the girl, you remember, who was involved in a very disgraceful scrape over the death of a man named Harvey Torrence not long ago. I'm surprised that you're so concerned over such a girl, a good-looking chap like you." He looked quickly and angrily down at her. Suddenly, standing in the middle of the floor facing her, he seemed to realize for the first time that he was alone in the room with her. He turned, as if to go, but she put out a hand swiftly and caught hold of his arm.

The man from Missouri buys a Model 40.

"I WANT to be shown," and Atwater Kent all-electric Model 40 shows him what real radio reception is. "Let's see your power," says he, and an array of stations marches across the FULL-VISION Dial. "More than power," says Model 40. "Range and selectivity. Notice how sharp and clear every station is."

"Good tone, too," admits the sceptic. "But how long can you keep up performance like this?"

"I'm a modest chap," answers Model 40. "You'd better ask that question of the nearly 2,000,000 families that own Atwater Kent Radio. But remember one thing: I'm 1929 improved all-electric radio."

"What's more, I'm lower priced because I'm the most popular set in the world. And what's still more, the current I use from the light socket costs only a fraction of a cent an hour."

"Send it out to the house," says the man from Missouri. "I'll take it."

Now, Model 40 wants to talk to you. Say when.

When? Well, what time is more appropriate than the present? Christmas is at hand—the family will be united for the holidays—and there are hundreds of wonderful programs to be had for the taking. A small payment down places any set in your home—the balance at convenient terms.
